MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONSIndia Meteorological DepartmentNew Delhi, the 23rd January 1961*

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1961

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of Winter Precipitation in Northwest India during January to March (with the exception of March rainfall in Uttar Pradesh), from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:—

- (1) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (2) December rain at Port Blair,
- (3) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 5 to 8 Kms. (September second half and October first half).
- (4) December rain at Quetta.

2. Division 'Northwest India'

In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), Himachal Pradesh, Delhi, Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Kutch.

3. Data

The relevant data for the present season are:—

- (1) South American pressure—Pressure was 0.4 mb. above normal in December,
- (2) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large defect,
- (3) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India during September-October was much stronger than usual.
- (4) Quetta rain in December was much below normal.

4. Conclusion

Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting winter precipitation in Northwest India, this year, high level winds over northern India are very favourable, South American Pressure and Port Blair Rain are moderately favourable and Quetta Rain is unfavourable. The statistical indications are that the combined rainfall and snowfall in Northwest India during the period January to March 1961 is likely to be in moderate excess (i.e. between 26 to 50 per cent above normal).
